FAQs & Pricing Guide

Video Footage Usage

Professional video is an essential part of building a dance career and promoting the dance industry. Whether you are a dancer promoting performances, applying to companies, attending auditions, or approaching agents, high-quality video strengthens your personal brand and credibility.

For dance companies and dance schools, professional video is equally important when promoting classes, performances, workshops, and building a strong public presence. High-quality video helps communicate professionalism, attract new students, and showcase the identity and standards of the organisation.

It is important to understand that all video footage remains protected by copyright, and any commercial, promotional, or professional use — including marketing for dancers, dance companies, or dance schools — requires the correct licence. Below is a simple guide to help you use your footage properly and professionally.

Who owns the copyright to the video footage?

All video footage created by Sophie's Photography remains the intellectual property of Sophie's Photography.

When you purchase footage, you receive a licence to use the footage, not ownership of the copyright itself.

What counts as personal use?

Personal use is included with all standard purchases and covers:

- Sharing with friends and family
- Personal social media posts
- Personal video reels not used for promotion or income
- Keepsakes or personal archives

No additional permission is required for these uses.

What counts as commercial or professional use for dancers?

If your video promotes you as a dancer, supports your professional career, or promotes a dance organisation, it is considered commercial use.

This includes:

- Dance company, school, or personal website
- Audition submissions or showreels
- Electronic Press Kits (EPK)
- Competition, performance, or festival promotion
- Posters, trailers, or promotional campaigns
- Social media advertising or boosted posts
- Press features, media coverage, or online publications
- Agent, manager, or company submissions
- Sponsorships or brand partnerships
- Monetised YouTube or digital content

If the video helps generate bookings, professional exposure, or income, a commercial licence is required.

Why do I need a commercial licence?

Licensing:

- Protects you legally
- Gives you written permission for professional use
- Ensures copyright compliance
- Supports the creative work behind the footage
- Maintains professional industry standards

This is standard practice across photography, film, dance, and media industries.

What happens if video footage is used commercially without permission?

Unauthorised commercial use may result in:

- Copyright infringement investigation
- Removal requests
- Retrospective licensing fees
- Administrative charges
- Legal action where necessary

We actively monitor usage to protect our work and our clients' professional integrity.

I'm not sure which licence I need. What should I do?

Simply contact us with:

- The footage you want to use
- Where it will appear
- How long you need it

We will recommend the most suitable and cost-effective option.

How do I purchase a licence?

Email or message us and we will invoice and issue written permission quickly so you can promote your dance career with confidence.
